

Clue 4 Homophones AAA

There are 32 incorrectly spelt homophones. Replace each one with the correct spelling. At the end, the number shows which letter of the correctly spelt word is part of the coded message. So the 7th letter of the first incorrect spelling is the first letter. Make sure you have found all the mistakes before you start decoding.

The bowls, with remnants of the desert from last knight's meal, had been left their by the guests. Freda poured some serial - found in the hire of the two cupboards – and looked out of the window. A tall fur tree cast a shadow over the beds of mint, rosemary and time. The postman sauntered up to deliver the male as a large lorry turned left onto the mane road. Piece was restored as the lorry departed and the pail sunlight revealed a squirrel's twitching tale on the bird-table.

Carrying the kitchen waist up the garden, she saw a cue forming down the road. It was plane to see that the driver of a Fiat had not red the One Way sign. She watched the seen with interest as a large motorbike arrived with a raw, the driver impatient with the weight. He fort his way through, the mussels on his arms bulging, as reign began to fall. Ate minutes later the police arrived and find the Fiat driver.

"I know I'm not aloud that way but you shouldn't prophet from my mistake," complained the driver.

Hearing a message on the radio, the policewoman replied, "We have to chute off now, I hope this has taut you a lesson."

Freda went indoors and climbed the stares. The storey was fresh in her mind as she began to right her diary. The raise of the evening sun lit the room.

(7,4,5,1,6,2,4,3,4,3,3,3,3,4,5,4,5,4,4,5,6,2,3,4,4,4,5,5,4,4,4,3)